Spring 2020

COMING OUT OF THE FOG & BACK INTO THE WORLD...SLOWLY

When I wrote my last letter, at the end March of 2020, I noted that March was quite possibly the longest month of our lives. Now, looking back upon March, April and May 2020, I may have spoken too quickly.

Spring 2020 was the longest Spring of our lives. And yet, here we are, surviving. I have never been so proud to be part of a Country, a Province or a City as I have been this year. Amidst the grumbling (lol we all did a little bit of grumbling) and the quiet streets, we were able to keep our Covid-19 cases and deaths down while other countries dealt with much larger and more permanent outcomes.

Many people, our family included, took to Zoom and started getting creative in and around the house. I had the longest coffee dates I had had in years with my sisters, my Dad figured out Zoom and both of my Grandmothers took to Facetime like champions.

I started a book club called “The Rose Gold n’ Lit Club” based on the Reese Witherspoon Hello Sunshine book club and connected with some of the AMAZING women in my life to broaden our reading repertoire and had the amazing honour of Alka Joshi, the author of the NYT Bestseller, The Henna Artist, join us on our Zoom book club

We found some amazing hiking trails. Yes. We are now the hiking couple and the hiking family. We started playing Jackbox on TV with the kids, we painted rocks as a family and we even did two virtual paint nights as a family.

As things are beginning to open up, we are enjoying socially distanced golf, safe patio dinners and family barbeques and it is fantastic! But we are also going to keep some of our Quarantine life intact. Backyard camping with the kids, virtual paint nights, our own backyard patio and coffee dates and some Zoom meetings because spending all that extra time driving just doesn’t make sense in all cases. Virtual is possible and virtual will happen more and more we think.

I have been selected once more to be on the CREA Global Committee, and I have my Certified International Property Specialist designation – so honoured 😊

We also celebrated our first Wedding anniversary on June 24th and it was absolutely LOVELY 😊
